HONGKONG, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 28, 189;

THE all-absorbing topic of conversa tion in nearly every circle in the East is the sharp decline in silver and the dreaded further decline in value of the white metal. On the principle the sharper the blast, the shorter 'twill last, it may be hoped the severe fall in silver which has followed the action taken by India may not last very long. But who can tell? It is unsefe to dogmatise upon such matters, as no one who is even in a position to know something about the silver question seems to have the heart to prognosticate what the course of the market may be. One thinks that the half-crown limit of the dollar is the bottom price; while others fear it may go considerably lower. Our morning contemporary appears to look upon a one-and-sixpenny dollar as a possibility. on the score that silver can be produced even at as low a cost as 9d. per ounce. This is, we think, taking not only an over-gloomy but an inaccurate and needlessly extreme view of the situation. It is true that the repeal of the Sherman Act in the States may cause a further decline, but the holders of silver may, if strong enough, hold their stocks for better prices-if, indeed, the Silver men do not prevent the repeal of the silver-purchasing law. The action of the Indian Government is not altogether a surprise, as the probability of protecting the rupee has been more than once suggested. The disastrous influ ence which such a course must exercisupon the 'unprotected' silver furnishe a conclusive proof, to the advocatee of a fixity of standard by internstional consent, of the necessity for some general agreement being arrived at by which an end would be put to these trade-destroying fluctuations. If Threadneedle Street could be brought to regard bimetallism (or a fixity of standard, if that expression is preferred) from a less one-sided point of view than at present, an agreement could be arrived at. England stops the way, and Home Rule now stops England. There are, of course, many persons who are strongly averse to any change; but the times have so altered that something must be done, and the Eastern trade (which must be worth something to England) ought now to be considered. And now that India has begun to fight for her own hand-after waiting long and patiently for relief from the Mother Country-the threatened collapse of trade with silver-using countries will surely open the eyes of those at Home whose business it is to safeguard the commercial interest of the Empire. To talk of Federation and to make demonstrations over Imperial Institutes are all very well, but to play with this great question instead of grappling with it is a very grave error. That we believe is the opinion of most of our soundest men in England, although it cannot be denied that opposite views are held by men of position. The evil to be remedied, however, is unfortunately too marked to be overlooked much longer ; and if this sharp decline in silver values, and the consequent paralysis of trade in India and the East, leads to a speedier consideration of the subject, of the latest and most approved kind, then the action of India may turn out and we are well able to compete in to be the best thing that could have weeks is pretty nearly the limit to which it lides .- Money Market Review. can endure. The British Minister, Capt. Jones, V. C., is trying hard to arrange for the transfer of the negotiations to Paris, his idea probably being that they can be more amicably conducted there, under the eyes of Europe, so to speak, than by the Governor-General of Cochin-China, surrounded by journals oternally shricking for immediate war, and by officials who certainly have nothing to lose if a campaign is decided on. Whether Capt. Jones will succeed in his endeavours as mediator is, however, by no means cortain. The situation as far as France is concerned is singularly like that of 1885, in Tonquin. You will remember the war with China was nover formally declared-not a single consul hanled down his tricolour in the Treaty Ports, although the minister did, if my recollection serves mo, leave Peking for Shanghai. Yot the straggle the same here. Capt. Thoreux is on his way hither, under Siamese escort (though he will be liberated on arrival); Khone is besieged : troops are drilling here hourly, and being sent Mekongwards in small batfray-and yet those who are most likely to know say that war will not be proclaimed. Whather it will take place or not is another

I have spoken of the preparations for war. They are quite the biggest thing Siam has ever gone in for, though it must be remembered that, excepting for a trithan a warship. A Danish merchant here has just gone home to get one or two more for the Siamese Government, and meantime all the powder, cartridges and rifles in the East are being bought up at famine prices. The river is also being mined by the naval department, and a look-out is kept across the bar for the hostile fleet. In the river a little French fighting craft. and a slightly bigger English ditto, are anchored opposite their respective legations, waiting for the ball to open. Trade is naturally being considerably affected; exports are almost stopped and in some cases property holders are realising their possessions. There is the usual growd of adventurers, ready for anything. from leading a Siamese forlorn hope, Speaking of torlorn hopes-although, personally, I sympathise to some extent with the people here, I osnnot but admit that the army is much skin to Falstaff's famous company, There are perhaps five thousand altogether, many of them pressed men, armed with Mannlicher rifles which few of them have over fired, baro-footed, in arroars with their pay, and-if it is not treason to say it-very far from brave. opposed to Annamite troops they might do something; if put in the field against what Von Multke called his men- cannonfood.'
